

About me:

My name is Kees Verweij. I'm an Industrial designer with a special interest in experience and interaction design. I'm fascinated by the influence that technology has on our society and the possibilities of technology to change the way we see the world and each other. I'm passionate about using technology to create magical interactions and experiences, by hiding them in unexpected designs. I'm interested in creating experimental designs that challenge and explore new relations with our products, surroundings and each other. I'm a maker; by building and prototyping I make my ideas experiential. In doing so I aim to create engaging social experiences between people and the build environment.
